To the clowns at Finessefleet,

Yes, I fucking sent those emails. And guess what? I meant every goddamn word. No accidents, no hacks, no excuses. Just pure, undiluted contempt.

Because this entire so-called Foundation is a festering, dysfunctional cesspool of incompetence run by ego-stuffed fossils who wouldn't recognize vision if it slapped them across the face. You parade around with fake titles, meaningless meetings, and bloated bureaucratic bullshit like it actually means something. Spoiler: it doesn't.

Your "systems"? Broken.

Your "authority"? Laughable.

Your "competence"? Nonexistent.

Your self-importance?

A cosmic joke. You sit in your echo chambers, clapping for each other's mediocrity, mistaking compliance for competence and cowardice for leadership. You've built a monument to stagnation, and somehow have the audacity to act surprised when someone calls it out.

You act like this place is sacred, like your policies are scripture. But really, it's just a graveyard of ambition where creativity goes to die and ambition gets strangled by red tape.

You've wasted time, talent, and opportunity — and worst of all, you've wasted me. But not anymore.

I'm done.

Done with the charade.

Done with the posturing.

Done with the dead weight that calls itself "visionary."

Take your investigations. Take your meetings. Take your shallow threats. Print them, file them, and shove them somewhere useful — because none of it means a goddamn thing to me now.

I'm walking out of this disaster with my head high and both middle fingers raised.

No regrets. No apologies. No looking back.

Rudranath Roy

(Finally free — and far too fucking good for this place)
